Port Usage and Centurion Technologies Products

A common question asked is, “What ports do your products use?”. Centurion products use the following ports:

25552
25553
25554
25555

The ports listed above must be open on the Smart Shield Client and the Smart Control machines. In addition, any network device such as a router or firewall must also allow the ports to be open. If these ports are not open, the software will not be able to communicate correctly.

If you are having issues setting up your software, please contact technical support. They have software tools to test that the correct ports are open between two machines.
